Ambidextrous approach

a design approach that incorporates structures and management processes that are appropriate to both the creation and the implementation of innovation.
the way in which changes occur in an organization.
departments that initiate change, such as research and development, engineering, design, and systems analysis.
Creativity

the generation of novel ideas that may meet perceived needs or respond to opportunities.
Culture change

change in the values, attitudes, expectations, beliefs, and behavior of employees.
Dual-core approach

an organizational change perspective that identifies the unique processes associated with administrative change compared to those associated with technical change.
Horizontal coordination model a model of the three components of organizational design needed to achieve new product innovation: departmental specialization, boundary spanning, and horizontal linkages.

Idea champions organization members who provide the time and energy to make change happen; sometimes called advocates, intrapreneurs, and change agents.

a safe harbor in which ideas from employees throughout the organization can be developed without interference from company bureaucracy or politics.
an approach that brings together participants from all parts of the organization, often including key stakeholders from outside the organization as well, in an off-site setting to discuss problems or opportunities and plan for change.
New-venture fund

a fund that provides financial resources for employees to develop new ideas, products, or businesses.
Open innovation

an approach that extends the search for and commercialization of new products beyond the boundaries of the organization.
a behavioral science field devoted to improving performance through trust, open confrontation of problems, employee empowerment and participation, the design of meaningful work, cooperation between groups, and the full use of human potential.
Organizational change the adoption of a new idea or behavior by an organization.

Organizational innovation the adoption of an idea or behavior that is new to the organization’s industry, market, or general environment.

Product and service change change that pertains to the product or service outputs of an organization.

Skunkworks

a separate, small, informal, highly autonomous, and often secretive group that focuses on breakthrough ideas for the business.
Strategy and structure change change that pertains to the administrative domain in an organization.

Switching structures

an organization creates an organic structure when such a structure is needed for the initiation of new ideas and reverts to a more mechanistic structure to implement the ideas.
Team building activities that promote the idea that people who work together can work as a team.
Technology change

change in an organization’s production process, including its knowledge and skill base, that enables distinctive competence.
Time-based competition based on delivering products and services faster than competitors, giving companies a competitive edge.
Venture teams

a technique used to foster creativity within an organization by setting up a small team as its own company to pursue innovations.