

Process in action

McDonald's

Update

McDonald's began moving towards social networking after an internal study showed that the employees were often looking for colleagues with expertise in certain areas or for authors of information they found useful. McDonald's employees and some partners will soon be able to create their own profiles on the Company's awareness social media platform (formerly iUpload), from which they can blog and participate in communities.